Project report One Health Usambara

Vaccination of dogs against Rabies in 2025

One Health Usambara is a charity project working to improve human health through improving animal health and welfare. One of its most important missions is preventing the spread of rabies, a deadly but preventable disease, through large-scale dog vaccinations.

Rabies-infected animals cross from Mkomazi National Park into the Western Usambara region, where local dogs can become infected. Because many of these dogs are cared for by children, they are at a higher risk than adults.

This year, our dedicated team vaccinated an incredible 1,806 dogs; 600 more than last year! Thanks to this effort, the "protective ring" of vaccinated dogs now stretches past the original hub of eight villages around Mambo, down the mountain ridges and out across the plains to Mnazi. As well as keeping people safe, the project teaches families how to care for and train their dogs, strengthening the bond between them.

The project is supported by Linda and Owen Glenn, veterinary surgeons from Northern Ireland, and organised locally by Juma Tupa, Chairman of Usambara Green Nourishers NGO and Headmaster of Sunga Secondary School, in cooperation with MamboSteunPunt. Over the years, seven local vets and seven auxiliary officers have been trained to safely handle, health-check and vaccinate dogs.

Education was this year an integrated part of the project

Our team worked with a very high standard and they are trusted in the local communities. This not only ensures top-quality care but also creates local employment, making the programme more sustainable.
Linda and Owen have funded the project since the beginning. But to help it grow further, reaching more villages and protecting more families and dogs, additional sponsorship is needed and greatly appreciated.
If you're visiting the Usambaras, you may even come across our teams at work in the villages.
